Reap the benefits of thinking like project management without becoming a Project Manager

How to Think Like a Project Manager is designed for leaders and employees who want to advance their leadership and management skills. It will help you understand and apply the basic principles of project management.

The course begins with an exploration of the difference between operational work and project work. From there you will apply key principles that shape the way a project manager thinks, approaches, and manages a project. Participants use a variety of small and large group conversations and activities to explore key principles of project management. Some of the topics covered include defining scope and why it's important, the value of a project charter, how to create a work break down structure, and expectations of a project team member.

The course includes:

- Live virtual training with Dr. Dawn-Marie Turner
- One copy of How to Think Like a Project Manager Participant Booklet
- Tools and project management templates

Participant Benefits and Take Away

- An understanding of why projects fail and how project management can prevent failure
- Clear actions to take to set up any project for success
- Knowledge of common project management terms to enable you to fully and comfortably participate on a project team

Further training is planned to build on this introductory course - “Project Management Excellence”
